Networking for Success

Did you know that most job-seekers get their jobs through networking? Are you as confused as so many others are about how to effectively network in your job and career search? Networking is an amazing tool to help uncover job leads and learn more about career fields, but it is also the most misunderstood aspect of job-hunting. This informative seminar removes the mystique of networking.

Job-Search 101

If you are new to job-hunting, or need a detailed refresher on the ins and outs of how to develop a job-search strategy, this seminar is perfect for you. You'll learn everything you'll need to know to plan your job-search, including job-hunting research and strategies, resume and cover letter development, career fair strategies, networking, as well as salary and job-offer negotiation.

Finding Your Career Passion

Are you still searching for that career path that truly excites and motivates you? Not sure about your major? This seminar shows you how to begin the process of a deeper self-assessment of interests and abilities. You'll also learn how to use this new information about yourself to find majors and careers that are right for you.

How to Wow Them in the Job Interview

Employers and hiring managers complain that one of the biggest weaknesses of college student and college grad interviewees is a lack of understanding and preparation at the job interview. This session will cover everything you need to know about interviewing, from preparation and planning beforehand, to tactics for nailing the interview, and additionally, things you need to do after the interview.
